For those who don't know much about Rio, the idea of a gringo living in a favela may seem a bit shocking. However, the reality is somewhat different. Some favelas in the southern part of the city (the rich part) have gone through several processes, like pacification (first) and gentrification (after) that have made these places “safe for ...

stayed in a guesthouse there. And Vidigal is considered to be, I guess, favela-lite2, if you like. It’s considered to be one of the safest, or maybe the safest, favelas, and apparently some people say it’s not even really a favela anymore, which I still think it is. Umm, but this is the favela that rises up from Leblon beach. It’s below the
