An interview evaluation form allows job interviewers to score an applicant's interview in a consistent way, comparing candidates fairly. Data is then transferred to a scorecard used by HR or the hiring manager to determine which candidate, based on all interviewer feedback, is the best fit for the organization.

An interview scorecard is designed to keep your focus on strengths when hiring, rather than a lack of weakness. By giving more weight to the skills necessary for a specific role and less weight to nice-to-have traits, you ensure that if an applicant rocks the important categories but scores poorly in the unimportant ones, they're still considered.

How to Create an Interview Scorecard (and Why You Need One)
